News of the arrival of another son in the Castellane family recalls much of the gossip with which the young count and his American wife have kept society since their marriage a few years ago. The most interesting fact is the changed appearance of the countess. As a bride she looked but a slip of a girl. and while her toilet was always sweet and seemed to have no idea of how to make the

The two elder Castellane children are simply charming. Petite, like their parents, they have inherited their mother's big soft eyes, with the Castellanes' regular, refined features and Dresden china complexion, with tight little silky flaxen curls all over their heads. They are dressed after the manner of all French children, and their manners are exquisite. All the Gould children are brought up to be simple and courteous, recalling their grandmother, the wife of the late Jay Gould, who, while she was the most modest woman imaginable, devoted herself to her home and children. Her regime was a very strict but gentle one, and her children were brought up without airs or frills or

REVERSE OF A BOOM HERE.

Property Moves as in an Overgrown Country Town-Large Demand for Small Farms.

"The real estate market is just a drag," said a prominent dealer yesterday. "I know attempts have been made to indiin Indianapolis, but it is not true. Very few properties in the city are now selling what they are really worth. There may be a few lots in the north part of the city that are good investments and that are increasing in value, but with these exceptions, and business property, the market is indeed a drag. In the downtown residence a dollar's worth in the last twenty or thirty years. I know this is so because I have thirty years ago, and to-day it is not worth one penny more than when I bought it.

"There are many inquiries for property, Invitations were issued last week by Mrs. but everybody wants to buy a bargain and worth. There are several causes for this along the Pacific coast. They will occupy People prefer this method to selling, and dispose of his property. The fact of the matter is, Indianapolis is still adhering to the customs of a big, overgrown country | $5 town, and conditions are just beginning to assume the attitude of a city. When these conditions exist in any city there is the same result, a slack market and few sales except at bargains. The people of Inproperty purchased is usually for that purpose. The people generally have enough money to live on and there is no necessity "So far as a boom in real estate is concerned it is likely that Indianapolis will day night for the benefit of the junior denever have another. As it gradually becomes a city you will notice that prices become more stable and property offers small percentages. In chart, the situation is this: their property, which they would be compurchasers will buy nothing that is not a bargain. I believe small properties are the properly located are never long vacant. They yield a much larger percentage and are always kept occupied, while the more expensive properties on the streets running north are not such ready renters and pay no more than interest on an equivalent

"Yes, the transfers recorded indicate an active market, but we cannot tell about these transfers without looking into them. They may be made in trades or under incumbrances, which are not real transfers. What I call a transfer is when a man pays a stipulated amount for a piece of property in cash or in part payments. The transfers recorded do not state the condition of the sale, and we have nothing to go by except the mere figures, which are sometimes heralded as greatly increased prices."

GENTLEMEN:-The name of the CHICKERING PIANO has long been a synonym for excellency of workmanship and artistic tone quality, and I am glad to be able to say that my personal experience with the instrument has confirmed all that I have heard of its merits. So many new names are constantly appearing in the piano-producing world that the choosing of an instrument is an exceedingly puzzling task, and it is comforting to have a name like that of the Chickering, which has stood the test of so many years without tarnishing its bright lustre, on which to base the assurance that we know what we are purchasing and need fear no diappointment,
